

You hold the keys to the gates that separate our society from George Orwell's "1984" prediction. It is IMPERATIVE that you keep big corporations from controlling what we see, hear and, ultimately, think. The fewer people that control the vast information networks of America, the easier it is for a single ideology to be planted in the minds of Americans. I've read several new stories today that, honestly, freak me out. The scariest being that the FCC, the guardians of the most important asset in the world (INFORMATION), is "expected to ease the rules that limit the number of information avenues that can be controlled by one corporation". I hear that the rules are being reviewed due to the need for a more realistic view of the needs of modern media. Correct me if I'm wrong, but there are MORE people, and, therefore, MORE opinions in today's world than before. So how does that translate to LESS people owning MORE avenues through which those opinions and ideas are shared with the world as a whole?

Explain it to me because I don't know how THAT math works.

I implore you to keep this country great by ensuring that ALL ideas and opinions are heard. Not just those by people with deep pockets.
